

Kevin T. McEneaney is the author of The Enclosed Garden (1991) and Longing (1997), which has been translated into French and Japanese. For over a decade he has been co-editor of The Irish Literary Supplement and a contributing editor of Encyclopedia Americana, for which he has written over thirty articles. He teaches literature at Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. and divides his time between the wood shed and the wood stove.

His recent chapbook, The Poet's Mistress (2004), offers a meditation on death, but he remains as excited about life as any robin or butterfly.